Election, Tuesday, November 4.

SARA BRENNER announces that she will not dye her hair when she appears as Cleopatra. Now the world will breathe more freely.

Mississippi's new constitution will provide that "all elections by the people shall be by ballot." There should be an additional clause abolishing the shot gun.

TAMMANY has resolved to take a census of New York to show that the Government's count underestimated the population of the village. Suppose they try a Tammany count such as they have on election days. Of course it would be "honest."

It is singular that of all the big men the Democratic party claims to have, Cleveland and Hill are the only two with Presidential honors. It is possible that the Democracy is reduced to such straits that there are only two men in the party who are worthy of mention in this connection?

In England there are fifty chemical manufacturers. Over forty of them have combined to form a trust for the purpose of forcing up prices. England is a Free Trade country. When a trust is formed in the United States it is charged to the account of Protection. To which account will England's chemical trust be charged? And to which account will be charged all the other trusts with which England is plastered?

It is explained by the Standard, unofficially, of course, that the price of oil has been cut because there is so much of the product. This is entertaining in view of the fact that stocks are decreasing and consumption is still far beyond production. A better explanation is that the Standard controls the market and intends to buy as cheap as it can. If there were able-bodied competition the Standard would see its way clear to pay more. Competition is what it should have. If producers had nerve that is what it would get.

The identity of the scoundrels who attempted the wholesale wrecking of trains on the New York Central road and the destruction of hundreds of innocent people is no longer a secret. The confessions of the men under arrest make it plain. It is unfortunate for the cause of the Knights of Labor that strike leaders were implicated in what proves to have been an organized conspiracy. Though the Knights of Labor as an organization is guiltless, it must necessarily suffer for the mad acts of its members in New York.

Where Mr. Mills is Wrong.

Mr. Mills, of Texas, made a speech to the farmers of Iowa recently, in which he referred to an article written by Thomas G. Shearman in the Forum. In this article Mr. Shearman shows that less than 25,000 persons own $31,500,000 of the national wealth, which is more than one-half the entire amount. Seventy persons are named by him in one of his articles who own $2,700,000,000.

Mr. Mills, in quoting these statements neglected to tell his hearers a very important thing in connection with them. For instance, Mr. Shearman published a list of seventy millionaires in this country—men who own $2,700,000,000. In this list of seventy, which includes the names of all our great millionaires, there are not more than four who made their fortunes in protected industries, sixty-one of the most gigantic fortunes being amassed in trade, speculation, oil, railroads and other business not affected by the tariff.

Mr. Mills is a demagogue.

From Pittsburgh to the Heart of Virginia.

It is as certain as anything can be that before long the Baltimore & Ohio line from Morgantown to Pittsburgh will be constructed. With the completion of the Camden road to the interior, which road is to be operated by the same company, the Baltimore & Ohio will have a line reaching from Pittsburgh to the Canby river, a wedge of steel driven from the heart of the Ohio into the heart of West Virginia.

With the Brandon branch and the Grafton & Greenbrier there will be short and quick rail communication between Pittsburgh and a part of West Virginia rich in timber, fuel, gas and coaling coal, fire clay, iron, farming and grazing lands. The building of the railroad means the development of this promising portion of West Virginia.

The people who are to inhabit that which is now almost wilderness will need supplies, hardware, clothing, groceries, the thousand things of necessity and luxury which civilized man will have when he can. Who is going to supply these things, Pittsburgh or Wheeling?

It does not follow that Pittsburgh will make an easy commercial conquest of this new territory because she is the larger city. To-day, in certain lines of the jobbing trade, the salesmen of Wheeling have a better knowledge of the country than the salesmen of Pittsburgh have. The smoky shadow of that driving city, Wheeling, passes the outcrops of Baltimore and Philadelphia to the eastward, of Cincinnati and Columbus to the southward and westward.

Wheeling can if she will take at the start and hold to the finish the valuable trade of the new territory now opening and further to be developed by the new railroad. It is for the business men of Wheeling to say whether they will do this. It will not do to wait until the current has run in another direction.

A Democratic Support of McKinley.

Major William McKinley's chances for re-election grow brighter every day, in spite of the infamous gerrymander which placed him in a district with 3,000 Democratic majority. The latest leading Democrat to give the gerrymander the stamp of his disapproval and to come to the support of McKinley, is Hon. George L. Converse, of Columbus.

Mr. Converse is a Democrat and a friend of Mr. Thurman. He has always been a straight Democrat and has represented the Columbus district in Congress. He has not, however, been a Free Trader. He is a Protectionist, and being a consistent one, he cannot any longer train with the Democratic party since it has fallen into the hands of the Golden Club. He was with his party in everything but its iniquitous tariff policy, but now he finds that consistency requires that he support a Republican candidate for Congress.

Mr. Converse's endorsement of Mr. McKinley was not the action of a sore-head, but of a man who had the courage of his convictions. It was made in a public speech before the Ohio Wool Growers' Association at the State Fair. Of his action a contemporary says:

There could have been no more significant place for the endorsement of McKinley than at the State Fair, where the wool growers of the State are the agriculturalists of the State. In this gathering party politics was unknown, and the committee which prepared the resolutions was made up of two Republicans and one Democrat, all members of the Wool Growers' Association. Mr. Converse helped draft the resolutions, and he presented them in a speech which was more eloquent of McKinley than the resolutions themselves. He evoked the sentiments of the people of Ohio when he said: "McKinley is too good a man and too great a man to be permitted to retire to private life, and I think that the wool growers of the State see to it that he is not retired, and that he will stay in the White House for four years, that they will carry this question of the tariff to the ballot box, and that they will have to look to the State Fair for their answer."

It was not a question of politics with Mr. Converse. It was a question whether or not the interests of the people of Ohio should be correctly represented in Congress.

Whether Mr. McKinley is elected or not, it is probable that the majority against him will be so materially reduced as to be significant of the manner in which the Protection Democrats of Ohio receive the efforts of their national party to force Free Trade upon them. It will bring the Protection fight into State politics next year when, if he is defeated for Congress this year, Mr. McKinley will likely be the Republican candidate for Governor. There is no doubt about how Ohio stands on the tariff question.

THE CUT IN OIL.

A Standard Man Talks—Movement Among Operators to Take Care of Themselves.

Pittsburgh Times.

C. N. Payne, of Titusville, was in Pittsburgh yesterday. He is the chairman of the committee of five which controls the Standard Oil Company's immense interests in the field. He has been identified with the oil business for more than twenty years and is acquainted with nearly every operator or speculator who has ever been in the oil business.

Mr. Payne had nothing to say about the political situation, but intimated that he was right at home on the subject of oil. When asked directly whether he was to be another cut on premiums this month, he replied:

"No, I do not know of another immediate reduction in the premiums on oil. The fact is we had to reduce the premiums owing to the increased production. The producers do not take into consideration the fact that the Standard is the only buyer, and has to take care of the oil from over 1,000 wells. There never was more enterprise among operators than at present, and the only way for the producers to keep up the market is to stop drilling. Unless they do the market is bound to go down. Here in Wildwood we had a daily production of nearly 1,000 barrels thrown on our hands within a very few days. It is less than a year since they were drilling and speaking of in Allegheny county and to-day there are wells scattered all over it and the most of them producing."

"Have you heard any talk of independent producers and pipe lines?"

"Yes, and I would not be surprised if one of them should materialize. It is to be expected. There is a good deal of crumbling among the producers over the cut in oil and some of them have the money to equip a plant."

"How about the speculation market?"

"I mingled with the speculative trade for eighteen years and at the end of that time I came to the conclusion that there was no money in it. The speculative business has been playing out for years, and it is now nearing the end of its string. I do not believe that it can be saved."

PRODUCERS TO ORGANIZE.

A meeting of Butler producers will be held this evening at the Hotel Vogue, at Butler, to discuss ways and means of protecting their interests. They are all discouraged by the recent reduction in the premium from 20 to 12 cents a barrel on Butler oil, and the result of the meeting may be the formation of a company on the co-operative plan to build a refinery. A large number of operators are interested and have promised to give their time and money to see the project carried to effect. The producers consider their only salvation is to build, own and operate pipe lines in every field. Captain W. A. Clark states that in 1877 he and others surveyed a route for a pipe line from the Allegheny town to a point on the Ohio river, a distance of 35 miles. The line was estimated to cost $25,000, and a refinery with a daily capacity of 1,500 barrels at Rochester, to cost $200,000. This line, he claims, can be built at the same cost to-day and serve the purpose as well as when it was originally planned.
